Ideas and Tips

Affordable housing can be hard to find in Waterloo Region - without rent control legislation, rents to new tenants may be set at any rate. There are still rules regarding rent increases for current tenants. Find out more from the Landlord and Tenant Board, 1-888-332-3234.

Applications for subsidized or geared-to-income housing are available at the Housing Access Sites. Each site has the same general application form that covers almost all of the subsidized housing locations within Waterloo Region. Requesting a specific housing location may make things move more slowly - the more options you consider the better.

Applications go into a centralized waiting list and, while the waiting list may be lengthy, it is still worth the time to complete the form. When you reach the front of the line, subsidized housing may still be an option for you. Be sure to maintain contact with the Housing Access Site and inform them of any phone number or address changes so they can reach you.

The Housing Access Site should also have a listing of the housing that is not a part of the co-ordinated system. These need to be applied to individually if you are interested in being on their waiting list.

What else can I do?

There are ways to look for market-rent housing that may be affordable. Local newspapers and community advertising papers are available for use at locations like the libraries and SPCKW/CICWR.

Some companies specialize in matching clients with suitable rental properties, and while some provide the service free to the renter, others may charge a finders fee. Always ask up front about any costs to you. There are also internet websites with housing listings that you could search at community internet access sites. We have computers in our office that are available to anyone. Call us at 519-579-3800 to find a site near you.

When vacancy rates are low people sometimes advertise in places like bulletin boards at grocery stores and other community sites. Landlords can post information for free and avoid the costs of classified ads and still receive enough enquiries to fill vacancies.

Finally, networking! Everyone you know should be aware that you are looking for housing, and can help you to look. Think of all the resources you already have that could help you in your search for safe, affordable housing. Your church, your parent and child group, your self-help group...any groups or associations you are involved with represent your connections to the community. All of these friends, family members, and co-workers need to let you know as soon as they spot a sign in a window, or hear of someone putting in their notice, so you can follow up quickly.
