Monetary Donations

Donations of cash or other financial donations are the backbone of any charity or program offered by an agency, and any little bit helps. But don't get carried away just because it's the holidays –make sure to exercise caution when donating money by ensuring that the charity who is asking you for donations is a registered charity. The Canadian Revenue Agency keeps a searchable database of all registered charities in Canada (<http://www.cra-arc.gc.ca/chrts-gvng/lstngs/menu-eng.html>) that will help you to verify charitable status of any organization. Remember that donations made before December 31st can be claimed as charitable donations on this year's taxes.

Not sure which organization you'd like to donate to this year? Canada Helps (<https://www.canadahelps.org/en/>) is a trusted website for donating to charities in Canada, which enables you to find organizations by keyword, category of giving or by current campaigns (<https://www.canadahelps.org/en/campaigns/>).

After the Holiday season is over

While volunteers are appreciated around the holiday season, all organizations that help people in need are in need of volunteers year-round. Some organizations even require volunteers to attend training sessions and make a specific time commitment to their organization (often 8- 12 months) in order to help support their clients with familiar faces. See below for some possible places to get started volunteering.
